“The Race that Never Was” Horse Racing: Aintree; Official Race-Card, “The Martell Grand National, Aintree, Saturday April 3rd, 1993”, 8vo, 52pps, illus. & adverts throughout, illus. wrappers, [Signed by All Fifty Jockeys of the Grand National] Unusual & Scarce, possibly the only one extant. This Race is remembered for being the first time that this world-famous steeplechase was declared void, after 30 of the 39 runners began and carried on racing despite a false start that was declared. Seven of the field eventually went on to complete the course, with “Esha Ness” ultimately crossing the finishing post first, ironically in the second-fastest time in Grand National history. As a result of this calamity, The Jockey Club made the decision not to re-run the race, and it has since been called The Race that Never Was. Bookmakers were forced to refund an estimated £75 million in bets staked. The Jockey Club launched an inquiry which led to a number of changes in the starting and recall procedures for future races.

“The Race that Never Was” Horse Racing: Aintree; Official Race-Card, “The Martell Grand National, Aintree, Saturday April 3rd, 1993”, 8vo, 52pps, illus. & adverts throughout, illus. wrappers, [Signed by All Fifty Jockeys of the Grand National] Unusual & Scarce, possibly the only one extant. This Race is remembered for being the first time that this world-famous steeplechase was declared void, after 30 of the 39 runners began and carried on racing despite a false start that was declared. Seven of the field eventually went on to complete the course, with “Esha Ness” ultimately crossing the finishing post first, ironically in the second-fastest time in Grand National history. As a result of this calamity, The Jockey Club made the decision not to re-run the race, and it has since been called The Race that Never Was. Bookmakers were forced to refund an estimated £75 million in bets staked. The Jockey Club launched an inquiry which led to a number of changes in the starting and recall procedures for future races.

LIST OF OFFICERS OF THE ROYAL ARTILLERY WITH UNIQUE M/SS ADDITIONS, 1763-1841 Military interest: A folio entitled List of Officers of the Royal Regiment of Artillery as they stood in the year 1763, with a continuation to the Present Time Ö (Greenwich, 1815). Contains lists of officers as of 1763 (the end of the Seven Years War) and continued down to 1815 (the end of the Napoleonic Wars). Includes many Irish names. Each entry gives name, dates from promotions from gentleman cadet to general, and "remarks" on the fate of each officer - whether he died, resigned, retired, transferred, was killed in battle, died of wounds, died of sickness etc. Many details of deaths in various battles of the Napoleonic Wars. What makes this copy unique is that its owner, Zachary Clutterbuck Bayly, has continued the lists with insertions in his own hand, bringing the total number of names to approximately 1,800. Bayly was a native of Seend in Wiltshire, joined the RA as a gentleman cadet in 1802 aged fifteen, and retired with rank of lieutenant colonel in 1841. Interesting Manuscript Account of the Voyage of An Irish Yacht to Scandinavia, 1872 de Montmorency: A manuscript folio volume of 51 written pages narrating the voyage of the cutter yacht Mystery to Norway, Sweden and Denmark in the summer of 1872. The yacht's officers are listed as H. de Montmorency Fleming, "Owner, Skipper, General Navigator"; J.C. Fleming, "Master"; and W. de Montmorency, "Chaplain". These were Harvey de Montmorency Fleming (aged thirty), his father John Congreve Fleming (aged sixty), both of Barracore House, Goresbridge, Co. Kilkenny, and his cousin the Rev. Waller de Montmorency, rector of Kilsheelan, Co. Tipperary (also aged thirty - he became Archdeacon of Ossory in 1911). The first and second mates, boatswain, AB (able seaman) and cook cum steward are also named. The narrative begins with the arrival of the Mystery at Cowes in the Isle of Wight on 29 June 1872, having come over from Dunmore East. It ends with her arrival at Inverness on 16 August following. During her seven-week voyage she visited Christiansand, Gothenburg (G^{te}teborg), Elsinore (Helsing^r), Copenhagen and Karlskrona. The narrative is lively and in addition to daily details of the voyage there are entertaining accounts of local customs, buildings, personalities and types of food. The volume is profusely illustrated with photographs, lively pencil sketches by Harvey Fleming, printed maps, rubbings of Scandinavian coinage, and small engravings. A fascinating insight into the seafaring activities and observations of a group of Anglo-Irish gentlemen in the reign of Victoria, orig. cloth backed marbled boards. As a m/ss, w.a.f. A Victorian Boy's Diary Manuscript: A volume measuring 19cms x 13cms, bound in hf. calf with brass clasps (hasp missing) containing diary entries of William Winter of Birmingham. They begin on 15 November 1868, shortly before his 13th birthday, and continue in some detail over the next 40 or so pages down to the beginning of 1871. They record his family life (his father was a clergyman), school days, meetings with friends, outings, parties, and crushes on girls. On holiday to Fontainebleau in 1870 they are caught up in the outbreak of the Franco-Prussian War and he and his father are arrested as Prussian spies. Thereafter the entries consist of sparse notes recording his entry into Oxford, his studies there, his ordination as a clergyman and services as a curate. In 1885 he reluctantly accepts a parish in Devon but resigns within months as the parish is not financially viable. In 1886 he and his new wife emigrate to New Zealand. Poll Return for Clonmines, Co. Wexford, 1761 Co. Wexford: An interesting original Manuscript Certificate, reporting that at a meeting of Burgesses held on 9 May 1761, Henry Alcock of Wilton and Henry Tottenham of Tottenham Green were returned as MPs of Clonmines. Signed by James Boyd the portreeve, and six others. The election can hardly have generated much excitement: Clonmines in South Wexford had been a prosperous little town in the Middle Ages, but by 1761 it was a cluster of uninhabited ruins. Nonetheless, it returned two members to the Irish House of Commons down to 1800. The "voters" were the burgesses (townsmen), numbering thirteen, none of whom lived there (there was no town). They were hand picked by the patron, Lord Loftus, and allegedly included several of his own servants! Along with other so-called rotten boroughs, the constituency was abolished at the Act of Union in 1800. Single sheet, as a m/ss, w.a.f. (1) * Rare historical document. "Tottenham in his Boots."

Important Early Manuscript Poem by James Stephens With Critical Manuscript Comments by George Bernard Shaw Manuscript: A folio page containing a poem entitled "The Earth Song" signed by James Stephens. There are six verses, each of eight or nine lines. Written across both sides of the sheet are comments, by George Bernard Shaw, to whom Stephens had evidently sent the poem for his appraisal. Shaw's critique is fairly devastating: "Unless you have an intensity of feeling that transfigures everything for you and can express that feeling in lines that have beauty, dignity, fascination, you cannot write poetry". However, Shaw reassures Stephens that the prompt return of a short story he had sent to an editor does not mean it is no good, and he criticises the facetious tone of Stephens's letter to the editor: "Englishmen don't understand jokes in the wrong place - sometimes not even jokes in the right place." He urges Stephens to persist with his writing but warns him not to be financially dependent on its success. Shaw's remarks are signed from Maybury Knoll, Woking, and dated 29 December 1902. Much about Stephens's early life is obscure, and at this period he was employed in a series of poorly paid clerical jobs of short duration. His first known literary contributions were made to the United Irishman in 1905, so this early composition - with Shaw's reaction to it - is specially significant and unique. As a m/ss, w.a.f. (1)
